Preface

Welcome to the fourth edition of Who's Who in the Movies, a comprehensive guide that revised and replaced the long-familiar Halliwell's Filmgoer's Companion. Within its pages, among much other information on the background and history of cinema, are details of some 13,000 individuals who have enriched film in one way or another, both in front of the camera and behind it.

I'm not sure how many would qualify as stars. Indeed, I have been wondering whether the word carries much meaning these days. Stars were invented in the silent era, when audiences demanded to know the names of the then usually anonymous players. It was the beginning of the phenomenon of fans, who would become fixated on a particular actress or actor and go to see whatever movie they appeared in.

In the sound era, the big studios not only encouraged fans, supplying columnists and magazines with information about their favourites, but also manufactured stars. MGM's boast that it had 'more stars than there are in the heavens' was one its publicists strove to make true.

The studios then controlled every aspect of their contracted stars' lives. They ensured they always looked glamorous. They had them photographed by outstanding portrait photographers such as George Hurrell and John Engstead. Aided by the best make-up artists and hairdressers, the photographers not only took pictures but helped to create the stars' images. These images were reinforced by the roles they were assigned. The stars worked hard. At the height of her career, for instance, Bette Davies would appear in three or four films a year.

In return, the top actors and actresses would be cosseted by the studios, which would go to extraordinary lengths to protect them, covering up everything from murder and suicide to drunk driving and sexual peccadilloes.

They don't make them like that any more. We live at a time when the young expect fame almost as a given, something to be provided, along with the right to vote, in their late teens, now that the gap between celebrity and nonentity can be crossed within the space of a TV programme.

While Tom Hanks, Tom Cruise and Julia Roberts still head the A-list of actors, the value of star-names is diminishing as a means of attracting audiences and guaranteeing some sort of quality. This last year has been notable for the failure of starry blockbuster movies, such as The Island with Ewan McGregor and Scarlet Johansson, which earned no more than a third of its cost back at the US box-office, and Cinderella Man with Russell Crowe, which also failed to cover its costs in America. Two of the biggest hits of the year were King Kong, whose star was a computer animation, and The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, whose leads were played by young unknowns.

It is possible that audiences were turned off the heart-warming Cinderella Man by the off-screen outbursts from its star, which would have been hushed up in the studios' heyday, just as, in the past, Colin Farrell's tape of his bedroom antics would never have been available for viewing by all on the internet. Farrell's home movie probably attracted bigger audiences than his much-derided performance as Alexander in another blockbuster that failed to find an audience. Indeed, he evokes memories of Laurence Harvey as an actor who succeeds despite much public disinterest and critical apathy. His fan-base does not seem to consist of cinema-goers.

What was notable about this year's Oscars was that the contenders were mainly small budget movies, just as the name of the deserved winner of the Best Actor award, Philip Seymour Hoffman, may have hardly registered before with many casual filmgoers.

Perhaps we are at the beginning of a culture change. Even George Lucas, the man most responsible for creating the market in costly, adolescent adventures, believes that the day of the big-budget movie is over. The future, he said recently, lies with independent movies costing no more than $15m.

That, of course, is less than the money Tom Cruise would expect for turning up in the morning. If George Lucas is right, the future lies not with stars but with actors – with a little help from the dedicated craftsmen behind the cameras, of course.

As ever, I'm very grateful for all the input from readers, notably for the inspired help from Don Minifie and the welcome suggestions from Allan Fish and Alan Goble. Barnaby Walker helped with research and my thanks go to Monica Chakraverty, Jane Bennett and Alan Trewartha at HarperCollins for their editorial and technical skills. My agents Gloria Ferris and Rivers Scott provided essential support. My love goes to the person who outshines all others, my wife Barbara.

Explanatory Notes

Alphabetical order The main section of this book (Section 1, Who's Who in the Movies) is an A–Z of actors, directors, producers, writers and other key personnel involved in the movies, where all entries are in alphabetical order, on normal dictionary lines. Mac and Mc are treated as one, although the spelling is of course left distinct. Names such as Von Stroheim come under 'V' and Cecil B. De Mille under 'D'. All names, whatever their nationality, are treated as if the last name were the surname, e.g. Zhang Yimou will be found under Yimou, Zhang. Fictional characters can be found in Section 2 (Movie Remakes, Series, Themes and Genres). They are listed under their complete names, so that Antoine Doinel is under 'A' and Sherlock Holmes is under 'S'.

Personal dates The birth year of an actor or actress is often obscured beyond the powers of a crystal ball, and in some cases is impossible to discover in an industry that is averse to ageing. In general, the earliest date in print is the one preferred as most likely to be accurate.

Doubtful dates are prefaced by 'c.' (circa).

(*) indicates that the person has died, but the death is uncertain.

Film titles The title by which the film is known in its English-speaking country of origin is given. Foreign-language titles are generally translated when the film has been released in English-speaking countries, with the original title following.

Film dates It can be as difficult to ascertain the correct date of a film as it is to determine the personal dates of its stars. Some films sit on the shelf for several years before being released, while frequently more than 12 months can pass between an American film's release in its home country and in Britain. There is an undoubted area of confusion: Casablanca, for instance, was given a 50th-anniversary re-release in 1992, yet the film was not officially released until 1943, and also bears a 1943 copyright date. But it was shown to critics in November 1942, so it can also qualify as a movie from the earlier year. The aim here is to give wherever possible the date when the film was first publicly shown in its country of origin.

Filmographies Complete filmographies are indicated by the symbol ■. A complete entry should not necessarily be taken as a sign of eminence or as a seal of approval. Some people simply made very few films or had compact typical careers which are worth detailing as instances of what goes on in the film industry: the gradual climb, the good cameo role, the star period, the two or three 'dogs' in a row, the gradual decline, the cheap exploitation movie. Filmographies cannot be completed for several major directors and stars because not all of their earlier films can be traced.

Incomplete lists normally end with 'etc.', which means that there may be up to as many films again as have been listed, while 'many others' indicates that the list has only scratched the surface. These lists usually include either the first film or the most significant role of the subject, and end up with his or her most recent work, with dates coming closest together over the most prolific and significant period.

A subject's most significant films are indicated by italics. The reader may interpret 'significant' as meaning commercial, artistic, critical or personal success.

Short films (less than 50 minutes or so) are not normally accounted for unless the subject worked chiefly in this field.

Almost every performer and director now works in TV as well as films, and many make their reputations these days on the small screen. For this reason, significant appearances in television series are also listed after the filmographies. The main lists also include some, but not all, of a subject's TV movies, made for any of its forms from cable to satellite, and are indicated by '(TV)' after the title. The majority of the TV movies listed have also been released on video-cassette.

Quotes These are introduced by the symbol “. Quotes by the subject are indicated by his or her initials; from other sources, by the person's name.

Rosettes (❂) These are bestowed for significant work in a particular field over a sizeable period of film history, upon people with remarkable talents which are not easily duplicated. For rosette winners, one film is singled out in which the person concerned was at his or her peak.

Abbreviations The main ones used are:

a	actor
ed	editor
AA	Academy Award, indicating the winning of a Hollywood Oscar, awarded annually by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences
AAN	indicates a nomination for an Academy Award
BFA	indicates the winning of a British Film Academy award, awarded by the British Academy of Film and Television Arts
ch	choreographer
fx	special effects
m	musical score
md	musical director
oa	original author
original sp	original screenplay
p	producer, which covers all the many varieties of the breed, from executive producer to associate producer, co-producer, etc.
d	director
pd	production designer
ph	cinematographer
s	song(s)
w	screenwriter
wd	writer and director

Where more than one person is involved in an activity, it is indicated by co-, so that co-w means that at least two writers scripted a film.

The symbol '&' means that the function abbreviated is in addition to that normally expected of the subject. In an actor's list, '& wd' would mean that he or she also wrote and directed.

Abbreviations for countries include:

Aus.	Australia
Aust.	Austria
Braz.	Brazil
Can.	Canada
Den.	Denmark

Abbott, Bud (1895–1974) (William Abbott)
American comedian, the brusque and slightly shifty 'straight man' half of Abbott and Costello, cross-talking vaudevillians of long standing who became Universal's top stars of the early 40s. Bud, seldom seen without his hat, was the bully who left the dirty work for his partner, never believed his tall but true stories of crooks and monsters, and usually avoided the pie in the face.

After a TV series (1953) using up all their old routines, the team split and Abbott retired. In 1975 there was published Who's On First, a selection of frame-by-frame routines, by Richard J. Anobile. Bob Thomas's biography, Bud and Lou, was published in 1977, and appeared in 1978 as a TV movie, with Harvey Korman and Buddy Hackett as Abbott.

All Abbott and Costello movies depended for their effectiveness on the number of old vaudeville routines included, such as the following: 'All Because You Don't Like Mustard' and 'Jonah and the Whale' (One Night in the Tropics); 'Drill' (Buck Privates); 'Bussing the Bee' and 'Seven Times Thirteen Is Twenty-Eight' (In the Navy); 'The Moving Candle' (Hold That Ghost, Meet Frankenstein); 'Don't Order Anything' (Keep 'Em Flying, borrowed from Laurel and Hardy's Man o' War); 'Poker Game' (Ride 'Em Cowboy); 'Ten Dollars You're Not There' (Rio Rita); 'The Poisoned Drink' (Pardon My Sarong); 'The Telephone Call' (Who Done It); 'Bagel Street' (In Society); 'The Magic Act' and 'Slowly I Turned' (Lost in a Harem); 'The Mirror' and 'Who's on First' (The Naughty Nineties); 'Hole in the Wall' (The Noose Hangs High); 'Identification' and 'Silver Ore' (Mexican Hayride); 'The Gorilla' (Africa Screams); 'The Shovel Is My Pick' (Meet the Mummy).

■ One Night in the Tropics (their only supporting roles) 40. Buck Privates 41. In The Navy 41. Hold That Ghost 41. Keep 'Em Flying 41. Ride 'Em Cowboy 41. Rio Rita 42. Pardon My Sarong 42. Who Done It? 42. It Ain't Hay 43. Hit the Ice 43. Lost In A Harem 44. In Society 44. Here Come the Co-Eds 45. The Naughty Nineties (featuring their famous 'Who's On First' routine) 45. Abbott and Costello in Hollywood 45. The Little Giant (a doomed attempt to work separately within the same film) 46. The Time of Their Lives (an interesting failure) 46. Buck Privates Come Home 46. The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap 47. The Noose Hangs High 48. Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein 48. Mexican Hayride 48. Africa Screams 49. Abbott and Costello Meet the Killer, Boris Karloff 48. Abbott and Costello in the Foreign Legion 50. Abbott and Costello Meet the Invisible Man 51. Comin' Round the Mountain 51. Jack and the Beanstalk 52. Abbott and Costello Lost in Alaska 52. Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd 52. Abbott and Costello Go to Mars 53. Abbott and Costello Meet Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde 53. Abbott and Costello Meet the Keystone Kops 54. Abbott and Costello Meet the Mummy 55. Dance with Me Henry 56.

✪ For bringing authentic vaudeville to Hollywood in a few imperishable routines; and for cheering up a generation at war. Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein.

See Costello, Lou.

“ Abbott and Costello's comedy depended on caricature and contrast: the fat and the thin, the nervous and the foolhardy, the stupid and the stupider. Their work falls into well-remembered routines and reactions. There is chubby, terrified Costello calling after his partner: 'Ch-ch-ch-ch-ch-i-ck!'

There is his shy admission: 'I'm a ba-a-a-ad boy!'

There is the old pantomime gag of his seeing something alarming and running to tell his partner; by the time the latter returns the thing has naturally disappeared. There are repetitive routines such as the 'Slowly I Turned' scene from Lost in a Harem, with its Laurel and Hardy-like inevitability. Most memorably there is skilful nightclub cross-talk, seen at its best in the 'Who's On First' sketch which first brought them to fame. Here is part of it: 'A: You know, these days they give ballplayers very peculiar names. Take the St Louis team: Who's on first, What's on second, I Don't Know is on third …

C: That's what I want to find out. I want you to tell me the names of the fellows on the St Louis team.

I'm telling you. Who's on first. What's on second, I Don't Know is on third.

– Who's playing first?
Yes.
– I mean, the fellow's name on first base.
Who.
– The fellow playing first base.
Who.
– The guy on first base.
Who is on first.
– Well, what are you asking me for?
I'm not asking you, I'm telling you. Who is on first.
– I'm asking you – who is on first?
That's the man's name.
– That's who's name?
Yes.
– Well, go ahead, tell me.
Who!
– All I'm trying to find out is, what's the guy's name on first base.
Oh no, What is on second.
– I'm not asking you who's on second.
Who's on first.
– That's what I'm trying to find out!
What's the guy's name on first base?
What's the guy's name on second base.
– I'm not asking who's on second.
Who's on first.
– I Don't Know.
He's on third …'

And so on, for another five minutes.

Abbott, Diahnne (1945–)

Taxi Driver 76. New York New York 77. Welcome to L.A. 77. The King of Comedy 83. Love Streams 84. Jo Jo Dancer, Your Life Is Calling 86, etc.

Abbott, George (1887–1995)
American actor, playwright and producer of lively commercial properties. He sporadically invaded Hollywood to supervise their filming, and stayed briefly to perform other services. Born in Forestville, New York, he studied at the University of Rochester, and drama at Harvard's 47 Workshop. He began as an actor and dramatist in 1913, scoring his first great success in 1926 writing, with Philip Dunning, and directing the murder drama Broadway, which was later filmed twice. He won seven Tony awards and a Pulitzer prize for his theatrical work. The second of his three wives was actress Mary Sinclair.

AS DIRECTOR: Why Bring That Up? 29. The Sea God 30. Stolen Heaven 31. Secrets of a Secretary 31. My Sin 31. Too Many Girls 40, etc.

“ I must confess that one of my main defects as a director has always been an incurable impatience. – G.A.

Many great minds have made a botch of matters because their emotions fettered their thinking. – G.A.

Abbott, John (1905–1996)
English character actor, specializing in eccentric parts. Born in London, he began as a commercial artist, and made his professional debut on stage in 1934, before joining the Old Vic company to play Shakespearean roles, including Malvolio in Twelfth Night. He moved to work in Hollywood in the early 40s.

Don't knock masturbation: it's sex with someone you love. – W.A.

I was suicidal, and would have killed myself, but I was in analysis with a strict Freudian, and if you kill yourself they make you pay for the lessons you miss. – W.A.

Basketball or baseball or any sport is as dearly important as life itself. After all, why is it such a big deal to work and love and strive and have children and then die and decompose into eternal nothingness? – W.A.

In France, I'm a hero. In the United States I'm a nothing. Audiences for my films in the states are very small. I can't understand: I am very American, I like jazz, baseball, I was born in Brooklyn. It's mysterious to me. – W.A.

I like the nervous tension of New York; I like a gray, enclosed, concrete city. I like a mutable change of weather. – W.A.

You always think, my gosh, I want to meet a woman like I've seen in the movies: very beautiful, very charming, very kind, very amusing, very scintillating. You know, it causes real problems in life. – W.A.

I had grandiose plans for myself when I started. And I have not lived up to them. I've done some things that are perfectly nice. But I had a much grander conception of where I should wind up in the artistic firmament. What has made it doubly poignant for me is that I was never denied the opportunity. The only thing standing between me and greatness is me.
– W.A.

He has a face that convinces you that God is a cartoonist. – Jack Kroll

The only thing Woody Allen has in common with Ingmar Bergman is Sven Nykvist. – Joe Queenan

Andrews, Dame Julie (1935–) (Julia Wells)
British star of Hollywood films. A singing stage performer from childhood who became the original stage Eliza of My Fair Lady but failed to get the film role. She zoomed to international stardom the same year but her refreshingly old-fashioned image seemed to pall rather quickly. In 1995, she starred on Broadway in a musical version of her film Victor/Victoria. Married (1959-67) set designer Tony Walton and, in 1969, director Blake Edwards. Edwards announced in 1998 that, following surgery in 1997 to remove throat nodules, she may never sing again. She was made a Dame in the New Year's Honours of 1999.

Biography: 1996, Julie Andrews by James Arntz and Thomas S. Wilson. 1997, Julie Andrews by Robert Windeler.

❝ One senses that she is realistic enough to have enjoyed the good times while they lasted, and to fall from grace gracefully. But she may fight. After The Sound of Music, Christopher Plummer said that: 'Working with her is like being hit over the head with a Valentine's card.'

And some anonymous gentleman described her as: 'Like a nun with a switchblade.'

Moss Hart said: 'She has that wonderful British strength that makes you wonder why they lost India.'

Miss Andrews does seem to merit the suggestion of steel beneath the velvet. When she accepted her Oscar, which many thought went to her out of sympathy because Warners refused her the film of My Fair Lady, her little speech ran: 'I'd like to thank all those who made this possible – especially Jack Warner.'

Having got to the top by being sweet and old-fashioned, she quickly showed signs of disliking her own image. 'I don't want to be thought of as wholesome', she said in 1966, and promptly proved it by accepting a sexy role. She was also seen wearing a badge which read: 'Mary Poppins is a junkie.'

But her serene self-confidence may be something of a sham. She once said: 'Films are much more my level. On stage I never feel quite enough …'

One way or another, she achieved, briefly, a worldwide image best expressed by a Time magazine interviewer: 'She's everybody's tomboy tennis partner and their daughter, their sister, their mum … She is Christmas carols in the snow, a companion by the fire, a laughing clown at charades, a girl to read poetry to on a cold winter's night …'

Arliss, George (1868–1946) (George Augustus Andrews)

Distinguished British stage actor of the old school who in middle age was persuaded to face the cameras and unexpectedly became a star both in Britain and America, presenting a gallery of kings, statesmen, rajahs, eccentric millionaires and rather unconvincing hoboes. Born in London, he was on-stage from the 1890s and in 1901 accompanied Mrs Patrick Campbell to America, where he remained. Married actress Florence Montgomery (aka Florence Arliss) in 1899. Their son was writer-director Leslie Arliss.

Arthur, Jean (1900–1991) (Gladys Greene)
Petite, squeaky-voiced American leading actress who, after a long and dreary apprenticeship, was especially notable as the determined feminist heroine of social comedies in the 30s and 40s. Born in New York, she began as a model before being offered a contract by Fox, then spending more than a decade in small roles in undistinguished films at Paramount and elsewhere before leaving films to learn her craft on stage. She returned in the mid-30s to work for Columbia and became a star, though her years there were marked by continual battles with studio head Harry Cohn. When her contract ended in 1944 she ran through the streets shouting, 'I'm free! I'm free!' Garson Kanin wrote Born Yesterday for her, but she withdrew from the play, and the role made Judy Holliday a Broadway and Hollywood star. Her first marriage in 1928, to photographer Julian Anker, was annulled after a day, and she later married (1932–49) singer and producer Frank Ross Jnr.

A wire-haired fox-terrier who appeared (impersonated by several dogs) in The Thin Man and other films between 1934 and 1947.

Astaire, Fred (1899–1987) (Frederick Austerlitz)
American dancing star whose inimitable finesse and good humour delighted two generations. His half-spoken singing was almost equally delightful, and the films in which he was teamed with Ginger Rogers(*) have a magic all their own. Academy Award 1949 'for his unique artistry and his unique contribution to the techniques of motion pictures'. He was born in Omaha, Nebraska, and began in vaudeville before appearing in Broadway musicals, working with his sister Adele. When she retired in the early 30s to marry into the English aristocracy, he became a solo turn and was signed, and then released, by Goldwyn, before being put under contract by RKO, which began his successful partnership with Ginger Rogers. He married twice.

❂ For his apparently lighter-than-air constitution, his brilliantly inventive dancing, his breezy elegance, his unlikely but effective voice, and his pleasing longevity. Top Hat.

“ The most famous quote about the screen's nimblest dancer is the report of the studio talent scout on his first screen test: 'Can't act. Can't sing. Slightly bald. Can dance a little.'

In later years, when he was a household name around the world, he tried to match that for humility: 'I have no desire to prove anything by dancing. I have never used it as an outlet or as a means of expressing myself. I just dance.'

And: 'I just put my feet in the air and move them around.'

But in another mood, he did once confess: 'I suppose I made it look easy, but gee whiz, did I work and worry.'

Gene Kelly summed up his appeal: 'He can give the audience pleasure just by walking across the floor.'

And Mr Kelly graciously added: 'If I'm the Marlon Brando of dancing, he's Cary Grant.'

Graham Greene put it another way: 'The nearest we are ever likely to get to a human Mickey Mouse.'

C. A. Lejeune produced this analysis: 'I have never met anyone who did not like Fred Astaire. Somewhere in his sad monkey-sad face, his loose legs, his shy grin, or perhaps the anxious diffidence of his manner, he has found the secret of persuading the world.'

André Sennwald, in a review of The Gay Divorcee, was equally percipient: 'The audience meets Mr Astaire and the film at their best when he is adjusting his cravat to an elaborate dance routine or saying delicious things with his flashing feet that a lyricist would have difficulty putting into words.'

While Fred Astaire said in his 80s: 'When they review my shows, they don't say whether they're good or bad – they just write about how old I am.'

Astor, Mary (1906–1987) (Lucille Langehanke)
American leading lady who despite a stormy and well-publicized private life remained a star from the mid-20s to the mid-40s and remained in demand for character roles. Born in Quincy, Illinois, and a teenage beauty queen whose father was determined to get her into films, she found success when she appeared in Beau Brummell with John Barrymore, who became her lover. Her career not only survived a scandal in the mid-30s, when excerpts from her diary about her love affair with playwright George S. Kaufman were read out in divorce court and leaked to the press, but also her alcoholism in the 40s and 50s. She married four times, first in 1928 to director Kenneth Hawks, who died in a plane crash in 1930.

“ Doctor Who was the most wonderful part – I was a madman to give it up. They wouldn't give me the film, would they? They won't know how to do it. Popular films are tawdry, about images and not about thinking. – T.B.

The Doctor Who Society in America have conventions and I go among them and lay on hands. Middle-aged ladies stick their tongues in my ear under the pretext of listening. The odd thing is that after the age of 47 chunky little females have tongues like shrapnel. It makes me slightly deaf. A blessing in disguise in our business. – T.B.

I like the dead. They're so uncritical. – T.B.

Bankhead, Tallulah (1903–1968)

Gravel-voiced, highly theatrical leading lady of American stage and screen. The daughter of an eminent politician, she titillated Broadway and London in the 20s by her extravagant performance on stage and off, and later tended to fritter away her considerable talents by living too dangerously. Films never managed to contain her. Married actor John Emery (1937–41).

Autobiography: 1952, Tallulah.

Biography: 1972, Miss Tallulah Bankhead by Lee Israel. 1972, Tallulah, Darling of the Gods: An Intimate Portrait by Kieran Tunney. 1979, Tallulah: A Memory by Eugenia Rawls. 1996, A Scandalous Life by David Bret.

❝ She said of herself: 'I'm as pure as the driven slush.'

What one remembers about Miss Bankhead is not her merit as a performer, which in her heyday was considerable, but rather her well-publicized lifestyle, which kept her in the headlines throughout the 20s and 30s. As Mrs Patrick Campbell said: 'Tallulah is always skating on thin ice. Everyone wants to be there when it breaks.'

The lady herself issued such statements as: 'Cocaine isn't habit-forming. I should know – I've been using it for years.'

As a result, in her later years: 'They used to photograph Shirley Temple through gauze. They should photograph me through linoleum.'

But it was more sad than funny when someone asked: 'Are you really the famous Tallulah?', and got the answer: 'What's left of her.'

She concluded: 'The only thing I regret about my past is the length of it. If I had it to live over again I'd make the same mistakes, only sooner.'

Sooner or later she alienated most of her friends. Howard Dietz was the one who said: 'A day away from Tallulah is like a month in the country.'

Bara, Theda (1890–1955) (Theodosia Goodman)

American actress, the first to be called a 'vamp' (because of her absurdly vampirish, man-hungry screen personality). An extra in 1915, she was whisked to stardom on some highly imaginary publicity statistics (she was the daughter of an Eastern potentate, her name was an anagram of 'Arab death', etc.). A Fool There Was 15 is remembered for its classic sub-title, 'Kiss Me, My Fool!'; in 1919, her popularity waning, she forsook Hollywood for the Broadway stage, and when she returned in 1925 was forced to accept parts burlesquing her former glories, e.g. Madame Mystery 26. Wisely, she soon retired. Married director Charles Brabin in 1921.

Bardot, Brigitte (1934–)
Pulchritudinous French pin-up girl who, given world publicity as a 'sex kitten', used her small but significant talents to make some routine movies very profitable. Her early career was orchestrated by her first husband, director Roger VADIM. Later she was often a reluctant star and attempted suicide on at least one occasion, becoming reclusive and, in 1986, setting up a foundation to care for the welfare of animals. (In 1997, she was fined 10,000 francs for inciting racial hatred, after criticizing the Muslim ritual slaughter of sheep.) Married actor Jacques Charrier, millionaire Gunter Sachs, and Bernard d'Ormale, who had connections with the right-wing National Front. Her lovers included singers Serge GAINSBOURG and Sacha Distel and actor Jean-Louis TRINTIGNANT.

Barrymore, Ethel (1879–1959) (Edith Blythe)
Distinguished American actress of regal presence. The sister of Lionel and John, and daughter of leading stage actors Maurice Barrymore and Georgiana Drew Barrymore, she was born in Philadelphia and was on stage from 1893, becoming a Broadway star in 1901. She made a few silents but had contempt for Hollywood, alienating MGM when she went to work there in the 30s, when she was drinking heavily and had financial problems. She remained on Broadway until 1944, when she made her home in Hollywood. Her greatest role came after more than 40 years in the theatre: as Miss Moffat in Emlyn Williams's The Corn Is Green, a part that went to Bette Davis when it was filmed. Always conscious of her position as the most admired stage actress of her time, when a young actor pointed out that if he went where she directed him to stand he would be upstage of her, she replied, 'Oh, my dear, don't worry about me. Wherever I am is centre stage.' She was courted by Winston Churchill, engaged to actor Gerald Du Maurier, and had affairs, possibly platonic, with actors Conway Tearle and Henry Daniell. Married millionaire Russell Colt and had three children: Ethel (1912–1977), who became an opera singer and actress; the alcoholic John Drew (1913–1975); and Samuel (1910–1986). Both boys also occasionally acted, though without any particular distinction. She, her daughter, her brother John and her mother were satirized in George Kaufman and Edna Ferber's 1927 Broadway hit The Royal Family.

Barrymore, John (1882–1942) (John Blythe)
Celebrated, self-destructive American stage and screen actor, the brother of Ethel and Lionel Barrymore, and son of leading stage actors Maurice Barrymore and Georgiana Drew Barrymore. Born in Philadelphia, he studied at the Slade School of Art and worked first as an illustrator and cartoonist before following the family occupation from 1900. An undisciplined talent, he quickly became bored with repeating his performances night after night and, after triumphing on Broadway and in London in Hamlet in the early 20s, he quit the stage when Warner Bros offered him a three-picture contract at $76,250 a picture plus plenty of perks. Plans to film his Hamlet, made at various times by Warner's, Selznick and Alexander Korda, went awry (though a colour test he later made in 1933 allegedly remains in New York's Museum of Modern Art). An irresistible matinee idol with a 'great profile', he became a romantic movie hero in the 20s, but thereafter abused his talent. When Warner's refused to renew his contract in the early 30s, he worked for MGM, though that studio also tired of him. Alcoholism often dampened his film performances and he became too erratic to employ. He was fired from the role of the drunken actor Norman Maine in the 1934 version of A Star Is Born and finished playing parodies of himself on stage (in My Dear Children) and screen (The Great Profile). His second wife was poet, playwright and occasional actress Michael Strange, by whom he had a daughter, Diana; his third, actress Dolores Costello, by whom he had a daughter and a son, John Drew, Jnr; his fourth, Elaine Barrie, briefly became an actress. His lovers included Evelyn Nesbit and Mary Astor. He was played by Errol Flynn in Too Much, Too Soon 58, based on the autobiography of his daughter Diana, and by Jack Cassidy in W. C. Fields and Me 76.

Barrymore, Lionel (1878–1954) (Lionel Blythe)

Accomplished American character actor, the brother of Ethel and John Barrymore, and son of leading stage actors Maurice Barrymore and Georgiana Drew Barrymore. Born in Philadelphia, he first appeared on stage with his grandmother, the London-born actress Mrs John Drew, in 1893, and was a Broadway star by 1918, combining stage roles with screen appearances. Often reluctant to follow the family acting tradition, he preferred composing music and painting and etching, which he had studied in Paris, subsidized by Ethel. He turned his back on the stage to concentrate on movies after stage failures in the mid-20s. With the onset of sound, he also directed, including Redemption and His Glorious Night, the two films that destroyed the career of John Gilbert, and claimed to have invented the sound boom, by tying a microphone onto the end of a fishing rod. An addiction to morphine and cocaine hampered his screen career, as did his later confinement to a wheelchair, as the result of a fall or, possibly, syphilis. From the early 30s he was a familiar and well-loved member of the MGM galaxy, playing sentimental, crotchety grandpas, churlish millionaires and, in a long and successful series of films, Dr Gillespie. He was the author of a novel, Mr Cantonwine, a Moral Tale. Married actresses Doris Rankin and Irene Fenwick.

The Beatles
This Liverpudlian pop group achieved astonishing popularity in the early 60s, but the pressures of success caused a split and the members went their rich but somewhat malcontented ways. They were John Lennon (1940–1980), George Harrison (1943–2001), Paul McCartney (1942–) and Ringo Starr (Richard Starkey) (1940–). A biopic, Backbeat, about the group's earliest days in Hamburg, was released in 1995, directed by Iain Softley.

Benchley, Robert (1889–1945)
American magazine humourist who exploited the small problems of twentieth-century living. He appeared in many films as a lovable bumbler, usually trying to explain something very complicated or to control a patently unmanageable situation. Benchley made many amusing shorts consisting of lectures by him on matters of science or domestic harmony. One of them, How to Sleep (1935), won an Academy Award. In Mrs Parker and the Vicious Circle (1994) he is played by Campbell Scott.

Biography: 1946, Robert Benchley by his son Nathaniel.

❝ In Milwaukee last month a man died laughing at one of his own jokes. That's what makes it so tough for us outsiders. We have to fight home competition. – R.B.

It took me fifteen years to discover that I had no talent for writing. But by then I couldn't give it up because I was too famous. – R.B.

The reason for Benchley's success as a satirist was that he did not have to invent either the clown face or the commonplace. He wore them both like a pair of mismated socks. All the ineptitudes and foolish ignorances he needed as targets for his satire were right under his nose, in himself. – Ben Hecht

Benchley tended to spend his later years drinking in Hollywood's Garden of Allah hotel. When he finally left to go east he pointedly refrained from favouring a hated doorman. 'Sir,' said the man, 'aren't you going to remember me?' 'Sure,' said Benchley, 'I'll write you every day.'

Leaving a restaurant, Benchley approached what appeared to be a uniformed commissionaire and muttered: 'Get me a taxi.' The man bridled and said: 'Sir, I am a rear admiral in the United States Navy.' 'Really,' said Benchley. 'Then get me a battleship.'

Bergman, Ingmar (1918–)
Swedish writer-director who divides his time between stage and film. In the late 50s his films had world-wide impact because of their semi-mystic, under-explained themes and bravura presentation by a repertory of excellent actors and cameramen; his work later became more austere and withdrawn. When he was accused of tax avoidance in the mid-70s, he suffered a brief breakdown. Married four times; his lovers include actresses Harriet Anderson and Bibi Andersson, and he has a daughter with actress Liv Ullmann. At the 50th Cannes Film Festival he was awarded, in absentia, the Palme D'Or.

Bern, Paul (1889–1932) (Paul Levy)
Short, slightly-built German-born director and screenwriter of silents, and MGM executive. Born in Wandsbek, he emigrated as a child to New York, and studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, briefly working as an actor and stage manager. He is remembered because of the controversy surrounding his death by gunshot soon after his marriage to Jean Harlow and his enigmatic suicide note, which read: 'Dearest dear: Unfortunately this is the only way to make good the frightful wrong I have done you and to wipe out my abject humiliation. Paul. You understand that last night was only a comedy.' According to Harlow's biographer Irving Shulman, who had access to the papers and reminiscences of her agent, Bern was physiologically semi-impotent, and had beaten Harlow so badly on their wedding night that he damaged her kidneys, which later contributed to her death; while Louis B. Mayer insisted that Bern was homosexual. After his death, it was discovered that he was also maintaining a common-law wife, Dorothy Millette, who drowned herself on the night he died. Samuel Marx, who worked for MGM at the time, claimed that Millette murdered Bern. He was romantically involved with actress Barbara La Marr. In the bio-pic Harlow, he was played by Peter Lawford.

I'll only work with new people. If you stick with your contemporaries, you're dead. – D.B.

I'm still in the shell, and you're not going to crack it, ducky. – D.B. to Russell Harty in TV interview, 1986

I've got a good left profile and a very bad right profile. I was the Loretta Young of my day. I was only ever photographed on the left-hand profile. – D.B.

I was as scrawny as a plucked hen. The Rank Organization did supply me with dumb-bells. All I did was put on two sweaters and then put my shirt on. – D.B.

Famous line (Darling) 'Your idea of fidelity is not having more than one man in bed at the same time.'

Bogart, Humphrey (1899–1957)

American leading actor who became one of Hollywood's imperishable personalities, a cynical but amiable tough guy in a trench coat who summed up all the films noirs of the 40s, after a long apprenticeship playing gangsters. His second wife was actress Mary Philips (1928–37), his third actress Mayo Methot (1938–45), and his fourth Lauren Bacall. Died from cancer.

Bogart also appeared in a 1930 short, Broadway's Like That; and he made uncredited gag appearances in Two Guys from Milwaukee 46, Always Together 48, Road to Bali 52, The Love Lottery 53.

✪ For contriving to represent both Action Man and Thinking Man of the early 40s; and for taking both these roles with a large pinch of salt. Casablanca.

❝ To some extent Bogart tended to live his film roles. As Dave Chase the Hollywood restaurateur once said: 'Bogart's a helluva nice guy till 11.30 p.m. After that he thinks he's Bogart.'

So in a way his aptest quotes are from his movies. As Rick in Casablanca: 'I stick my neck out for nobody.'

Or as Sam Spade in The Maltese Falcon: 'Don't be so sure I'm as crooked as I'm supposed to be.'

Truman Capote commented: 'He was an actor without theories (well, one: that he should be highly paid), without temper but not without temperament; and because he understood that discipline was the better part of artistic survival, he lasted, he left his mark.'

Stanley Kramer saw through him: 'He was playing Bogart all the time, but he was really just a big sloppy bowl of mush.'

One feels that this hits the nail pretty squarely on the head: Bogie was a nice guy who enjoyed a good grouch. About, for instance, the untrained beefcake stars of the early 50s, many of them picked up for tests from sidewalks and gas stations: 'Shout 'gas' around the studios today, and half the young male stars will come running.'

About acting theorists: 'Do I subscribe to the Olivier school of acting? Ah, nuts. I'm an actor. I just do what comes naturally.'

About the industry: 'I don't hurt the industry. The industry hurts itself, by making so many lousy movies – as if General Motors deliberately put out a bad car.'

And: 'I made more lousy pictures than any actor in history.'

And about life: 'The trouble with the world is that everybody in it is about three drinks behind.'

Other actors, perhaps, knew him better than he knew himself. Edward G. Robinson: 'I always felt sorry for him – sorry that he had imposed upon himself the character with which he had become identified.'

And Katharine Hepburn: 'His yes meant yes, his no meant no. There was no bunkum about Bogart.'

Famous lines (The Maltese Falcon): 'Don't be so sure I'm as crooked as I'm supposed to be.'

(The Maltese Falcon): 'Let's talk about the black bird.'

(The Maltese Falcon): 'We didn't exactly believe your story, Miss O'Shea, we believed your 200 dollars. You paid us more than if you'd been telling the truth, and enough more to make it all right.'

(The Maltese Falcon): 'Yes, angel, I'm gonna send you over.'

(Across the Pacific): ' When you're slapped, you're gonna take it and like it.'

– But we're in the middle of the desert.

I was misinformed.'

(Casablanca): 'Louis, I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship.'

(The Big Sleep): ' I don't mind if you don't like my manners. I don't like them myself. They're pretty bad. I grieve over them on long winter evenings.'

Bow, Clara (1905–1965)
American leading lady, the 'It' girl of the 20s: her films depicted the gay young flapper generation and her wide-eyed vivacity was tremendously popular for a time, but she came to grief through trying to parallel her screen image in her private life. She was notorious for her promiscuity, and her lovers included Gary COOPER, Victor FLEMING, Gilbert ROLAND and Harry RICHMAN. Revelations of her affairs, and of an orgy with a football team, came out during a court case in 1931, when she sued her former secretary, who had embezzled her money and tried to blackmail her. The scandal finished her career at Paramount and her later pictures failed to draw. Married cowboy actor turned politician Rex BELL in 1932.

Brando, Marlon (1924–2004)

Influential American leading actor regarded by many as the greatest of all screen actors. He came to epitomise the Method approach, though it was a label he disdained. Born in Omaha, Nebraska, he trained at the Dramatic Workshop in New York and later at the Actors Studio, beginning on the stage. Under the direction of Elia Kazan, his portrayal of Stanley Kowalski in Tennessee Williams' A Streetcar Named Desire caused a sensation on Broadway and when he repeated it on film, even in a bowdlerised version. The performance and his uncompromising approach on and off the screen influenced a whole generation as well as fellow actors such as James Dean and, later, Robert DeNiro and Al Pacino. As he grew older, he appeared to despise acting and often tested directors to their limits. His choice of roles in the 60s was often eccentric, but he gave two remarkable performances in the 70s, in Last Tango in Paris and The Godfather. Thereafter, he grew fat and retreated into a more secluded life among what often seemed a dysfunctional family. Married actresses Anna Kashfi, Movita and Tarita Tariipaia.

Most of the time he sounds like he has a mouth full of wet toilet paper. – Rex Reed

I have eyes like those of a dead pig. – M.B.

Acting is the expression of a neurotic impulse. It's a bum's life. Quitting acting, that's the sign of maturity. – M.B.

Once you're a star actor, people start asking you questions about politics, astronomy, archaeology, and birth control. – M.B.

An actor's a guy who, if you ain't talking about him, ain't listening. – M.B.

I'm not interested in making an assessment of myself and stripping myself for the general public to view. – M.B.

I think I would have liked to be a caveman, a neolithic person. – M.B.

Too much success can ruin you as surely as too much failure. – M.B.

I've never had any respect for Hollywood. It stands for avarice, phoniness, greed, crassness and bad taste, but when you act in a movie, you only have to work three months a year, then you can do as you please for the rest. – M.B.

He was deeply rebellious against the bourgeois spirit, the over-ordering of life. – Elia Kazan

Democracy is a fine way to run a country, but it's a hell of a way to make pictures. – Lillian Hellman after working with Brando on The Chase

An angel as a man, a monster as an actor. – Bernardo Bertolucci

He was in a unique position. He could have done anything. But he didn't choose to. – Rod Steiger

No actor of my generation has possessed greater natural gifts; but none other has transported intellectual falsity to higher levels of hilarious pretension. – Truman Capote

The once-beautiful, most distinguished actor of our time has turned into a self-loathing slob and left a lot of human wreckage in his wake. – Peter Manso

Famous line (On the Waterfront) 'I coulda had class. I coulda been a contender.'

Burton, Richard (1925–1984) (Richard Jenkins)
Welsh leading actor whose dark, brooding good looks did not bring him immediate film success either in Britain or in Hollywood. His 1963 marriage to Elizabeth Taylor, however, helped him climb to the crest of what these days passes for stardom, as did their subsequent divorces and reunions. High living and a kind of contempt for his work kept him from the heights of both serious achievement and popular acclaim.

When I played drunks I had to remain sober because I didn't know how to play them when I was drunk. – R.B.

An actor is something less than a man, while an actress is something more than a woman. – R.B.

Certainly most movie executives were making love to the starlets. But then, so were most of us actors. – R.B. of Hollywood in the 50s

I was up to, I'm told, because, of course, you don't remember if you drink that much, about two-and-a-half to three bottles of hard liquor a day … Fascinating idea, of course, drink on that scale. It's rather nice to have gone through it and to have survived – R.B. in 1974

The Burtons offered me a drink and rolled in a liquor cart from the bedroom which was its permanent abode, and the conversation afterwards was limited to a discussion of twentieth-century poetry. – William Fadiman

There is no longer any novelty in watching the sad disintegration of his acting career. – Roger Ebert

Who could take that scruffy arrogant buffoon seriously? – Eddie Fisher

All great art comes from people who are either ugly or have a terrible inferiority complex. I know no one who is beautiful and produces art. – R.B.

Cable from Laurence Olivier to Burton at the height of the Cleopatra scandal: 'Make up your mind, dear heart. Do you want to be a great actor or a household word?' – Burton, replying: 'Both.'

Bushman, Francis X. (1883–1966)
Heavily-built American leading actor of the silent era, once known as the handsomest man in the world. Born in Norfolk, Virginia, he was on stage as a child, became a wrestler and sculptor's model and entered films in 1911. A year later he was voted the most popular screen actor in America by Motion Picture Story, and his earnings soon soared to around $1m a year. In 1915, he joined Metro, but his career faltered when he left his wife to marry his frequent co-star Beverly BAYNE. Coupled with accusations that he beat his wife and children, it was an act that earned him the hatred of Louis B. MAYER. When he walked away from the troubled Ben-Hur, Mayer dumped him as soon as his contract ended, and his days of stardom were over. (In the 40s, when a man with grievances against Mayer was charged with threatening to kill him, Bushman told the court that Mayer had ruined his career by blacklisting him.) After he lost his fortune in the 1929 Wall Street crash, he returned to the stage, making only occasional films, including some in Britain in the 30s, and ending with bit parts in unsuitable films of the 60s. His greatest role was as Messala in Ben-Hur, which was also notable for his handling of the horses in its spectacular chariot race. His son Ralph (1903–1978) acted in films of the 20s and 30s, sometimes billed as Francis X. Bushman, Jnr.

In England I was a Cockney actor. In America, I was an actor. – M.C.

I'll always be there because I'm a skilled professional actor. Whether or not I've any talent is beside the point. – M.C.

John Wayne once advised me, talk low, talk slow and don't talk too much. And then I went and made Sleuth. – M.C.

First of all I choose the great roles and, if none of these come, I choose the mediocre ones and, if they don't come, I choose the ones that pay the rent. – M.C.

You get paid the same for a bad film as you do for a good one. – M.C.

Campbell, Mrs Patrick (1865–1940) (Beatrice Tanner)

Leading British stage actress, the original Eliza in Pygmalion, who spent her last years playing supporting roles in Hollywood. A wayward talent – she once upstaged an actor by flicking chocolates against a backdrop of a starry sky, where they fell with an audible 'plop' throughout his big scene – she moved to America, where she had frequently toured, when she could no longer find employment in Britain. By that time she had lost her looks and grown fat, though retaining her acid wit. She was the model for the character of Hesione in Shaw's Heartbreak House and Orinthia in his The Apple Cart, and was caricatured by Marie Dressler as Carlotta Vance in Dinner at Eight. The love letters between her and George Bernard Shaw were turned into a successful play, Dear Liar, by Jerome Kilty. She wrote an unpublished memoir, Chance Medley, dealing with her experiences in Hollywood.

Autobiography: 1922, My Life and Some Letters.

Biography: 1961, Mrs Patrick Campbell by Alan Dent. 1984, Mrs Pat by Margot Peters.

■ The Dancers 30. Riptide 34. One More River 34. Outcast Lady 34. Crime and Punishment 35.

❝ She was as beautiful among women as Venice is among cities, and all her beauty was at the service of a genius as remarkable. – Rebecca West

She has an ego like a raging tooth. – W. B. Yeats

She was not a great actress; but she was a great enchantress, how or why I don't know; but if she wanted to capture you you might as well go quietly; for she was irresistible. – George Bernard Shaw

What enchanted me was her unwavering and ingenious rudeness to everyone there [Hollywood] who could possibly have been of assistance to her. She would encounter Harold Lloyd or Ruth Chatterton at a party, and murmur, 'Now tell me, what do you do? Are you connected with the cinema?' Her failure to be politic took on the proportions of a magnificent gesture. She was like a sinking ship firing on the rescuers. – Alexander Woollcott

Oh, Mr Thalberg, I've just met that extraordinary wife of yours with the teensy-weensy little eyes! – Mrs P.C. to Irving Thalberg, on Norma Shearer

Wedlock: the deep, deep peace of the double bed after the hurly-burly of the chaise-longue. – Mrs. P.C.

It doesn't matter what you do in the bedroom as long as you don't do it in the street and frighten the horses. – Mrs. P.C.

I was under the impression that the great battle of life was fought in our youth – not a bit of it – it's when we are old, and our work not wanted, that it rages and goes on – and on – and on. – Mrs P.C.

(Reported conversation) 'You are handsome enough to be in pictures.' – 'But Mrs Campbell, my name is Joseph Schildkraut.' – 'Never mind, you can change it.'

Famous line (when offered the role of the pawnbroker in Crime and Punishment) 'I could not possibly become a tradesperson.'

❝ When I'm shooting I become a monstrous exhibitionist egomaniac. It's quite weird, because you have to play the role of being a director. It's not necessarily because that's what you believe in, but it's what other people want out of you. I kind of debunk the whole thing by mincing around with a riding crop and whacking people with it and barking orders. – M.C-J.

Hollywood really is an industry about making money, not making films. – M.C-J.

“ The making of a motion picture is an endless contention of tawdry egos, almost none of them capable of anything more creative than credit stealing and self promotion. – R.C.

Like every writer, or almost every writer who goes to Hollywood, I was convinced in the beginning that there must be some discoverable method of working in pictures, which would not be completely stultifying to whatever creative talent one might happen to possess. But like others before me, I discovered that this was a dream. – R.C.

He looked as inconspicuous as a tarantula on a slice of angel food. – Farewell my Lovely

The edges of the folded handkerchief in her breast pocket looked sharp enough to slice bread. – The Lady in the Lake

She had a lot of face and chin. She had pewter-coloured hair set in a ruthless permanent, a hard beak and large moist eyes with the sympathetic expression of wet stones. There was lace at her throat, but it was the kind of throat that would have looked better in a football sweater. – The High Window

✪ For combining precision of comedy technique with a sentimental view of the common man which pleased the millions of oppressed and disarmed sophisticated criticism. Easy Street.

“ The son of a bitch is a ballet dancer! –

So pronounced W.C. Fields, having been urged to sit through and enjoy a Chaplin movie. Fields promptly realized that the Chaplin brand of comic art was not only more popular than his own, but one which it was impossible for him to emulate. He continued: 'He's the best ballet dancer that ever lived, and if I get a good chance I'll strangle him with my bare hands …'

Many people have been jealous of Chaplin's success, partly because he was never modest about it. His poverty-stricken childhood made him mercenary, and once at the top he displayed a private personality it was difficult to like. Even his friend Mary Pickford called him: 'That obstinate, suspicious, egocentric, maddening and lovable genius of a problem child.'

And Chaplin had never found a way of making friends with his public. Even in his autobiography he seemed at pains to present himself unsympathetically, as when he recalled telling Mack Sennett: 'The public doesn't line up outside the box office when your name appears as they do for mine.'

His memories of his manifold romantic activities are tastelessly presented: 'Like everyone else's, my sex-life went in cycles. Sometimes I was potent, other times disappointing.'

In the more intimate details his phrasing is curious to say the least: '[She was] a big handsome woman of twenty-two, well built, with upper regional domes immensely expansive and made alluring by an extremely low décolleté summer dress which, on the drive home, evoked my libidinous curiosity …'

His willingness to prognosticate on matters of which he plainly knows little, such as the true authorship of the Shakespeare plays, is often foolhardy: 'I can hardly think it was the Stratford boy. Whoever wrote them had an aristocratic personality.'

His philosophy is usually naïve, as in his much-attacked defence of murder in Monsieur Verdoux: 'Wars, conflict, it's all business. One murder makes a villain. Millions, a hero. Numbers sanctify …'

Determined to make his clown a tragic hero, he is frequently guilty of relentless sentimentality. The opening title of The Kid runs: 'A picture with a smile and perhaps a tear.'

As Hannen Swaffer once said: 'His gospel is like Mary Pickford's: the hope of a little child.'

Billy Wilder was more caustic: 'When he found a voice to say what was on his mind, he was like a child of eight writing lyrics for Beethoven's Ninth.'

He frequently over-estimated himself. Of The Great Dictator he declared: 'I made this picture for the Jews of the world.'

He was a poor loser. Having been forced to leave the United States, which made him rich and to which he owed a large amount in back taxes, he stated: 'I have no further use for America. I wouldn't go back there if Jesus Christ was President.'

Over the years he had alternately denied and proclaimed his Jewishness. This was a typical announcement of the late 40s: 'I am not a Jew! I am a citizen of the world! I am not a communist! I am a peacemonger!'

A rather limited attitude is struck in his remark about Negroes: 'They have suffered too much ever to be funny to me.'

(Yet Chaplin's own comedy derives from poverty and deprivation.) He took credit for every aspect of his films, and frequently denied it to those who helped him most. Yet he was not an inventive director: 'I am the unusual and do not need camera angles.'

Cinematographer Karl Struss said of him: 'He has no knowledge of camera direction. His films are completely theatre.'

Yet there is no denying that Chaplin managed very well by feeding his own self-importance. He used to say: 'You have to believe in yourself, that's the secret.'

And as late as 1960: 'I remain one thing and one thing only, and that is a clown. It places me on a far higher plane than any politician.'

In a sense he was right. Despite all Chaplin's failings, his tramp is an archetypal creation which strikes a chord in everybody and will live as long as films can be preserved. Chaplin always knew the virtue of simplicity: 'All I need to make a comedy is a park, a policeman and a pretty girl.'

That was in 1916, and ambition soon overtook him. Colleen Moore in her autobiography Silent Star tells that in 1922 a producer was contemplating a life of Christ, and Chaplin demanded audience and became very excited: 'I want to play the role of Jesus. I'm a logical choice. I look the part. I'm a Jew. And I'm a comedian … And I'm an atheist, so I'd be able to look at the character objectively …'

The funny thing is, he was very likely right. But Andrew Sarris saw the other side of his psyche: 'He will die as he has lived, an unregenerate classicist who believes in making movies he can feel in his frayed lace valentine heart.'

While nobody denied his business acumen, least of all Sam Goldwyn: 'Chaplin is no business man – all he knows is that he can't take anything less.'

And Douglas Fairbanks in 1925 saw the emotional force of his screen personality: 'He shows one inadequate man struggling against all the forces of nature.'

Chaplin's essential trouble was that he could never take advice. That he needed it was shown by his remark during pre-production of the truly awful A Countess from Hong Kong: 'A millionaire falling in love with a prostitute. What better story could they want than that?'

He wrote his first book featuring the Saint in 1928, then went to Hollywood as a screenwriter in the early 30s. RKO made the first Saint movie, starring Louis HAYWARD, in 1938; its success led the studio to buy all the stories featuring the suave detective, who was subsequently played by George SANDERS in five films. Charteris later sued the studio when, in 1941, it launched its Falcon series, featuring a suave detective played by Sanders. He became an American citizen in the 30s and presided over a growing empire of writers to ghost his stories. Married four times.

Chevalier, Maurice (1888–1972)
Inimitable French singing entertainer. Born into poverty in Paris, he began as a 12-year-old in café and musical-hall entertainments before becoming the protégé and lover of MISTINGUETT. He appeared in French silent films from 1908, but his international stardom dates from his contract with Paramount in Hollwyood in the 30s and his later films with Jeanette MacDonald for MGM. His film career faltered when he left Hollywood and returned to France in the late 30s. He re-emerged as an international star after surviving accusations of collaborating with the Nazis during the Second World War. Retired in his 80s and suffered from depression, attempting suicide. Special Academy Award 1958 'for his contributions to the world of entertainment for more than half a century'.

Clark, Dane (1913–1998) (Bernard Zanville)

Pint-sized American tough guy of the 40s, a poor man's John Garfield. Born in Brooklyn, New York, he studied at Cornell University and took a law degree at St John's University, New York; he tried unsuccessfully to become a baseball player and a boxer before working in labouring jobs and as a writer for radio. He was on stage from 1934 and worked with the Group Theatre before going to Hollywood. There his career suffered when he quarrelled with Jack Warner over a renewal of his contract: Warner called him 'a ham', and Clark hit him. As a result, Warner refused to lend him to Columbia to star in The Jolson Story, or to United Artists for the role of the boxer in Champion, which made Kirk Douglas a star. Warner also warned other studios against him, and he was forced to go to Europe to make a few uninteresting movies. Married twice. His lovers included Ida Lupino, his co-star in Deep Valley.

Cleopatra (69–30 BC)
The sultry Egyptian queen has been portrayed in many films, notably in a Méliès trick film of 1899; by unspecified American actresses in 1908 and 1909; by Helen Gardner in 1911; by Theda Bara in 1917; by Claudette Colbert in the de Mille version of 1934; by Vivien Leigh in Pascal's 1945 Caesar and Cleopatra; by Rhonda Fleming in Serpent of the Nile 1953; by Hedy Lamarr in The Story of Mankind 1957; by Elizabeth Taylor in the well-publicized 1962 version; and by Amanda Barrie in a spoof, Carry On Cleo, in 1963. There seems to be something about the lady that encourages waste, for the Leigh version was Britain's most expensive film and the Taylor version the world's; in neither case did the money show on the screen.

Cody, William Frederick (Buffalo Bill) (1846–1917)

American frontiersman, Indian scout and buffalo hunter, who discovered he could make an easier living playing himself on-stage and in 'Buffalo Bill's Wild West', a show which toured America and, later, Europe. Famous for having killed and scalped Chief Yellow Hair in single combat, he did much to create the myths that formed the basis of western movies. He is said to have invented the Indian war whoop, with the hand flapping over the mouth, to add excitement to his shows and so that it could be heard over the sound of gunfire. He featured sharp-shooting cowboys and battles between marauding Indians and western immigrants with their wagons drawn in a circle (in real life, attacks on wagon trains usually came when they were spread out across the plains). He gave employment to Wild Bill Hickok, Annie Oakley and Sitting Bull, and can claim to have been one of the first film-makers of faction – fiction based on fact. In 1913, he formed the W. F. Cody Historical Pictures Company to re-create major events in the history of the American West, using, where possible, the actual participants. His first and only film, of which a few minutes survive, was based on the massacre of the Sioux at Wounded Knee, and was distributed by Essanay, the company formed by 'Bronco Billy' Anderson. He has been played in movies by James Ellison in The Plainsman 36, Joel McCrea in Buffalo Bill 42, Louis Calhern in Annie Get Your Gun 50, Charlton Heston in Pony Express 52, Clayton Moore in Buffalo Bill in Tomahawk Territory 53, Gordon Scott in Buffalo Bill (Ger.) 64, Guy Stockwell in The Plainsman 66, Paul Newman in Buffalo Bill and the Indians 76, Peter Coyote in Buffalo Girls (TV) 95, and Keith Carradine in Wild Bill 95. He was also a favourite hero of silent movies.

Cohn, Harry (1891–1958)
American executive, chief of Columbia Pictures for many years; a former song-plugger and vaudevillian who built the company in 1924, reputedly from his sales of a film called Traffic in Souls. He was the model for the character of producer Marcus Hoff in Clifford Odets's The Big Knife, filmed by Robert Aldrich in 1955.

Columbia was once known as the Pine Tree Studio (because it has so many Cohns).

Biography: 1967, King Cohn by Bob Thomas; 1993, The Merchant Prince of Poverty Row: Harry Cohn of Columbia Pictures by Bernard F. Dick.

✪ For enjoying his career as an ogre and for bringing a Poverty Row studio up to the big time. Gilda.

“ When the big boss of Columbia Studios died in 1958, you could take your pick of brickbats and bouquets. The most famous tasteless comment came from Red Skelton on hearing of the huge crowds at Cohn's funeral: 'It proves what they always say: give the public what they want to see, and they'll come out for it.'

Then there was Hedda Hopper: 'You had to stand in line to hate him.'

And George Jessel: 'He was a great showman, and he was a son of a bitch.'

And Elia Kazan: 'He liked to be the biggest bug in the manure pile.'

And Samuel Goldwyn: 'He never learned how to live.'

And Budd Schulberg: 'He was the meanest man I ever knew – an unreconstructed dinosaur.'

But Cohn had a few defenders. There was Artie Shaw: 'He was a lovable old pirate.'

And, surprisingly, Ethel Barrymore: 'He knew the score.'

One thing was sure, Cohn thoroughly enjoyed his long tyranny. He said once: 'Gower Street is paved with the bones of my executive producers.'

And again: 'I don't get ulcers: I give them.'

Despite his frequent ill-treatment of actors and other creative people, he always averred: 'I kiss the feet of talent.'

He was disappointed in the treatment he got back from the stars he had created: 'I have never met a grateful performer in the movies.'

He maintained his confidence in his own ability: 'Great pictures make great stars. This girl (Novak) has had five hit pictures. Send me your mother or your aunt and we will do the same for them.'

He certainly knew what he wanted, and he had a long record of success. One of his mottoes was: 'Let Rembrandt make character studies, not Columbia.'

He once said to Daniel Taradash: 'Promise me you'll never make a picture where the characters walk out of the room backward.'

He claimed: 'All I need to make pictures is an office.'

In a more self-knowing mood, he admitted: 'If I wasn't head of a studio, who would talk to me?'

But he concluded: 'It's better than being a pimp.'

He once expounded his entire philosophy to Robert Parrish, who had asked to be allowed to direct good pictures: 'I make fifty-two pictures a year here. Every Friday the front door opens on Gower Street and I spit a picture out. A truck picks it up and takes it away to the theatres, and that's the ball game. Now, if that door opens and I spit and nothing comes out, you and everybody else around here is out of work. So let's cut this crap about only good pictures … I run this place on the basis of making one good picture a year. I'll lay everything on the line for that one. I don't care if it's Capra, or Ford, or Riskin, or Milestone – that's the good one. The rest of the time I just have to keep spitting out.'

As Frank Sinatra said: 'He had a sense of humour like an open grave.'

Colbert, Claudette (1903–1996) (Lily Claudette Chauchoin)
French leading lady who went to America as a child and became one of Hollywood's most durable and versatile light actresses of the golden age, most typically cast in smart emancipated roles. Born in Paris, she moved with her family to New York and began on stage at the age of 16. She first gained notoriety as Nero's wife Poppaea, bathing in ass's milk in Cecil B. De Mille's The Sign of the Cross. By 1938 she was the highest-paid actor in Hollywood. She preferred to be photographed from her left side, which she regarded as her best profile. After her screen career declined, she returned to the stage in the late 50s and continued to act in the theatre until the mid-80s. The first of her two marriages was to actor Norman Foster (1928–35); her lovers included Clark Gable, her co-star in It Happened One Night.

Cook, Joe (1890–1959) (Joseph Lopez)

American comic in Broadway musicals and revues of the 20s, 30s and 40s, and star of the movie version of his 1928 stage success Rain and Shine, which was directed in 1930 by Frank Capra, who turned it into a drama without music. A comedian with a broad grin and an original line in nonsense patter, he was also a multi-instrumentalist, knife-thrower, expert shot, rope-spinner, juggler, slack-wire walker and acrobat, skills which he demonstrated in the film.

Cook, Peter (1937–1995)

English comic actor, writer and revue artist. Born in Torquay, Devon, and educated at Cambridge University, he found success early as a revue writer, and as a performer with Alan Bennett, Jonathan Miller and Dudley Moore in the revue Beyond the Fringe. He founded the briefly fashionable nightclub The Establishment in the 60s and was the principal owner of the satirical magazine Private Eye. He formed a successful double-act with Dudley Moore, but boredom and heavy drinking hampered his later life. The second of his three wives was actress Judy Huxtable.

Cooper, Gary (1901–1961) (Frank J. Cooper)

Slow-speaking, deep-thinking American leading man, a long-enduring Hollywood star who always projected honest determination. Born in Helena, Montana, of successful English immigrant parents, he was educated partly in England, before working unenthusiastically as an illustrator and cartoonist. Determined to break into films, he went to Hollywood, where he used his horse-riding skills, learned on the family ranch, as an extra and bit player in westerns, progressing to two-reelers before becoming a star in his first feature, The Winning of Barbara Worth 26. Thereafter, he remained one for 30 years, as an embodiment of a strong, silent man of integrity and honour. Special Academy Award 1960 'for his many memorable screen performances and for the international recognition he, as an individual, has gained for the film industry'. Married Veronica Balfe, who had a brief Hollywood career under the name of Sandra Shaw. His lovers included Clara Bow, Evelyn Brent, Carole Lomabard, Lupe Velez, Ingrid Bergman, Grace Kelly and Patricia Neal; Cecil Beaton also claimed to have had an affair with him.

His defining roles were as The Virginian, in the film of the same name; Tom Brown, in Morocco; Lieutenant McGregor, in The Lives of a Bengal Lancer; Longfellow Deeds in Mr Deeds Goes to Town; Beau Geste, in the film of the same name; Long John Willoughby, in Meet John Doe; Alvin C. York, in Sergeant York; Lou Gehrig, in Pride of the Yankees; Robert Jordan, in For Whom the Bell Tolls; Howard Roark, in The Fountainhead; and Will Kane, in High Noon.

✪ For his sheer domination of the Hollywood scene for the first twenty years of the talkies. Mr Deeds Goes to Town.

“ The most underrated actor I ever worked with – Henry Hathaway

Fred Zinnemann put it another way: 'He had magic. The only time he was in trouble was when he tried to act.',

He was a poet of the real – said Clifford Odets. Whatever that means, it would have embarrassed Cooper. Perhaps Carl Sandburg put it another way: 'One of the most beloved illiterates this country has ever known.'

Cooper had no very high estimate of his own talent: 'People ask me how come you been around so long. Well, it's through playing the part of Mr Average Joe American.'

He had Mr Average Joe's reputed insularity: 'From what I hear about communism, I don't like it because it isn't on the level.'

He distrusted the socialism of plays like Death of ■ Salesman: 'Sure there are fellows like Willy Loman, but you don't have to write plays about them.'

He enjoyed his niche: 'Until I came along, all the leading men were handsome, but luckily they wrote a lot of stories about the fellow next door.'

For a man without acting training, he managed very well. King Vidor thought that: 'He got a reputation as a great actor just by thinking hard about the next line.'

Coop's own explanation was simpler: 'To get folks to like you, I figured you sort of had to be their ideal. I don't mean a handsome knight riding a white horse, but a fellow who answered the description of a right guy.'

Richard Arlen summed up: 'Coop just likes people, it's as simple as that.'

But Richard Zanuck latched on to another Cooper essential: he was part of the great outdoors: 'You could never put Coop in a small hat and get your money back.'

Famous line (Sergeant York) 'Folks back home used to say I could shoot a rifle before I was weaned. They was exaggerating some.'

Famous line (The Virginian) 'If you want to call me that, smile.'

Famous line (For Whom the Bell Tolls) 'A man fights for what he believes in, Fernando.'

“ I've never made the film I wanted to make. No matter what happens, it never turns out exactly as I hoped. – R.C.

Poe writes the first reel or the last reel. Roger does the rest. – James H. Nicholson

All my films have been concerned simply with man as a social animal. – R.C., 1970

I think there is always a political undercurrent in my films. With the exception of The Intruder, I tried not to put it on the surface. – R.C.

To one degree or another, almost all films finally adhere to the Corman policy. So many of them do have an enormous amount of action; the sex is there; the laughs are there; and, sometimes, to some degree, the social statement is there as well. The Godfather films are the most expensive Roger Corman films ever made, and I think that everyone's trying to exploit that formula, one way or another. But most people are less candid about it than Roger is. – Jonathan Demme

He once said, 'Martin, what you have to get is a very good first reel because people want to know what's going on. Then you need a very good last reel because people want to hear how it all turns out. Everything else doesn't really matter.' Probably the best sense I have ever heard in the movies. – Martin Scorsese

“ If you're a fascist in Hollywood, you work with great regularity. If you're not, you don't – so I don't. – A.C.

There is no place in Hollywood for certain directors. It has to do with the big corporations owning the studios and being tied into the military-industrial complex, or the Mafia. – A.C.

The movie business feels it must support war and encourage white yuppies to have babies. If you don't buy into that, you are ultimately excluded. – A.C.

Crawford, Joan (1904–1977) (Lucille le Sueur; known for a time as Billie Cassin)
American leading lady; one of Hollywood's most durable stars, first as a flapper of the jazz age and later as the personification of the career girl and the repressed older woman. Born in San Antonio, Texas, she began as a chorus girl. Few of her films have been momentous, but she has always been 'box office', especially with women fans, who liked to watch her suffering in mink. In 1978 her adopted daughter Christine Crawford published Mommie Dearest, which painted her as a monster and caused a sensation. A film version of the book was released in 1981, in which she was played by Faye Dunaway. Married actors Douglas Fairbanks Jnr, her second husband, and Franchot Tone. Her lovers included actor Clark Gable.

Cruise, Tom (1962–) (Thomas Cruise Mapother IV)
Leading American actor, the biggest attraction of the late 80s and early 90s. Born in Syracuse, New York, he is a high-school dropout who began acting in his late teens. His performance as a cocky jet pilot in Top Gun brought him stardom, and he proved he could also act in Born on the Fourth of July. He now runs his own production company, which starred him in the box-office hit Mission: Impossible and earned him a reported $70m; he then disappeared from view for more than a year, working on Stanley Kubrick's Eyes Wide Shut, while other, younger actors replaced him as box-office sensations. Married (1987–90) actress Mimi Rogers and (1990-01) actress Nicole Kidman. He has been romantically involved with actresses Penelope Cruz and Katie Holmes.

Curtiz, Michael (1888–1962) (Mihaly Kertesz)

Hungarian director of more than 60 films in Europe before settling in Hollywood, where he made some of the smoothest spectacles and melodramas of the 30s and 40s and also became famous for his fractured English. Born in Budapest, and educated at Markoszy University and the city's Royal Academy of Art and Theatre, he began as an actor before directing Hungary's first feature film, leaving the country when the Communists nationalized the film industry in 1918. He moved to Hollywood in the mid-20s to work for Warner's, where he became noted for his on-set ruthlessness, enabling him to finish films on time and budget, and for his often acerbic working relationships with Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, who both did much of their best work under his direction. Married actress Lucy Dorraine (1915–23) and screenwriter Bess Meredyth.

The Danziger Brothers (Edward and Harry)
American producers who after making Jigsaw 46 and two or three other films came to England, set up New Elstree Studios and spent 15 years producing hundreds of second features and TV episodes, hardly any worth recalling. Their reputation in the industry was not high. When working on a film for the exploitation director-producer Harry Alan Towers, an actor was told to crouch down. Instructed to crouch lower, he protested that he was as low as he could get. Came the voice of the cameraman, 'You could be working for the Danzigers!'

“ It would have been physically possible, if the spirit hadn't weakened, to make a hundred and twenty films in a year for Harry Lee and Edward J. Danziger, because any film they made that lasted more than three days began to run over budget. – Christopher Lee

I remember Danziger used to do four-minute takes, which was very demanding on the actors. Half the time you didn't have time to learn the dialogue. Doing a Danziger was really the end of the line. – Vincent Ball

“ For a girl with no looks, Bette Davis rose fast to the top and stayed there a long time. When she first arrived in Hollywood the official greeter missed her at the station, and his later excuse was: 'No one faintly like an actress got off the train.'

Carl Laemmle is credited with two waspish remarks about her: 'I can't imagine any guy giving her a tumble.'

And: 'She has as much sex appeal as Slim Summerville.'

She herself confesses: 'When I saw my first film test I ran from the projection room screaming.'

She finally settled for a career without glamour: 'Nobody knew what I looked like because I never looked the same way twice.'

Determination carried her through. As her later husband Gary Merrill said: 'Whatever Bette had chosen to do in life, she would have had to be the top or she couldn't have endured it.'

She admitted this herself: 'If Hollywood didn't work out I was all prepared to be the best secretary in the world.'

As David Zinman summarizes: 'All she had going for her was her talent.'

But by 1937 she was at the top of the tree, dishing out hell to those who had dished it out to her. Said her once co-star Brian Aherne: 'Surely no one but a mother could have loved Bette Davis at the height of her career.'

E. Arnot Robertson in 1935 had expressed a similar feeling in a different way: 'She would probably have been burned as a witch if she had lived two or three hundred years ago. She gives the curious feeling of being charged with power which can find no ordinary outlet.'

By the early 50s she was no longer a bankable star, and work was suddenly in short supply. She inserted a full-page ad in the Hollywood trade papers: 'MOTHER OF THREE: divorcee; American. Twenty years experience as an actress in motion pictures. Mobile still and more affable than rumour would have it. Wants steady employment in Hollywood. (Has had Broadway.) References upon request.'

She reflected bitterly on her career at the top: 'I was the only star they allowed to come out of the water looking wet.'

Jack L. Warner however remembered her with affection: 'An explosive little broad with a straight left.'

But despite all difficulties she persevered, and was still acting as she neared eighty. Vincent Canby said: 'Her career has been recycled more often than the average rubber tyre.'

Famous line (The Cabin in the Cotton) 'I'd like to kiss yuh, but I just washed my hair.'

Famous line (All About Eve) 'Fasten your seat belts, it's going to be a bumpy night.'

Famous line (Old Acquaintance) 'There comes a time in every woman's life when the only thing that helps is a glass of champagne.'

Famous line (Now Voyager) 'Oh, Jerry, don't let's ask for the moon: we have the stars.'

❝ Ready when you are, Mr De Mille. It's the tag-line of a long shaggy dog story, the purpose of which is to establish de Mille as the producer of enormous, stagey biblical epics. Towards the end of his life he did submerge himself in this role, but his career embraced almost every kind of movie. Whatever the show, he made a success of it, and he was respected throughout Hollywood as a disciplinarian who always got his films out under budget. There was a joke during World War II: 'Anyone who leaves de Mille for the armed forces is a slacker.'

He is credited with sending back a writer's script and attaching a terrifying cover note: 'What I have crossed out I didn't like.

What I haven't crossed out I am dissatisfied with.'

He exercised supreme control over his stars, and once said to Paulette Goddard: 'Remember you are a star. Never go across the alley even to dump garbage unless you are dressed to the teeth.'

He told his staff: 'You are here to please me. Nothing else on earth matters.'

He went to extreme lengths to prove his authority. Arthur Miller thought: 'I never met such an egotist in my life.

Even if he was wrong and knew it, once he said it it had to be.'

His brother William was awed by his ambition and achievement: 'The trouble with Cecil is that he always bites off more than he can chew – and then chews it.'

The same William cast a wry eye on Cecil's first Bible picture in the 20s: 'Having attended to the underclothes, bathrooms and matrimonial irregularities of his fellow citizens, he now began to consider their salvation.'

Even when Cecil dealt with heavenly themes, he kept his feet on earth. He said to a scriptwriter: 'It's just a damn good hot tale, so don't get a lot of thees, thous and thums on your mind.'

His comparative ignorance of his favourite subject provoked a much-repeated clerihew: 'Cecil B. De Mille Much against his will
Was persuaded to keep Moses
Out of the Wars of the Roses.'

He saw the Bible as a ready-made script factory: 'Give me any couple of pages of the Bible and I'll give you a picture.'

He took neither credit nor blame for his themes: 'I didn't write the Bible and didn't invent sin.'

He was also quite clear where his support lay: 'I make my pictures for people, not for critics.'

His approach to actresses was on similarly direct lines. In 1934, when he thought of Claudette Colbert as Cleopatra, he said to her: 'How would you like to be the wickedest woman in history?'

But he knew that what really mattered to a movie is not the star but the producer: 'A picture is made a success not on a set but over the drawing board.'

Action was another essential ingredient: 'I will trade you forty gorgeously beautiful Hawaiian sunsets for one good sock in the jaw.'

He chuckled at the result of his labours: 'Every time I make a picture the critics' estimate of American public taste goes down ten per cent.'

Typical reaction was Pauline Kael's: 'He made small-minded pictures on a big scale.'

Mitchell Leisen thought: 'He had no nuances. Everything was in neon lights six feet tall: Lust, Revenge, Sex.'

But Graham Greene had a soft spot for him: 'There has always been a touch of genius as well as absurdity in this warm-hearted sentimental salvationist.',
